

Anastasios Filntisis

Anastasios Filntisis graduated first of his class from the Political Science and International Relations Department of the University of the Peloponnese and has an MA in “European and International Studies” from the University of Athens (magna cum laude). Since 2015 he is working on his doctoral dissertation “Greece, EC/EU and international terrorism, from Cold War to the “new terrorism”: historical, political and ideological aspects” at the University of the Peloponnese. His research interests include Greek and European modern history, Cold War history and contemporary international security challenges. He has been head of the analysis department in the Konstantinos Karamanlis Institute for Democracy (2016-2018) and coordinator in the Hellenic National Defence College (2017-2018). He speaks Greek (native), English and German.

Publications: “From the “threat from the North” to the “threat from the East”: The withdrawal of Greece from NATO’s military wing and the revision of the Strategic Doctrine” (in Greek: “Από τον «από Βορρά» στον «εξ Ανατολών» Κίνδυνο: Η Έξοδος της Ελλάδας από το Στρατιωτικό Σκέλος του NATO και η Αναθεώρηση του Στρατηγικού Δόγματος”, Strategikon (in Greek: Στρατηγικόν), Vol.1 (June 2017, pp. 95-116).

US elections 2016: Waiting for the new world leader, (in Greek: Αμερικανικές εκλογές 2016, Περιμένοντας τον νέο πλανητάρχη, KKID, http://www.idkaramanlis.gr/sites/default/files/amerikanikes_ekloges_theseis_kai_prooptikes_teliko.pdf,

Trump and the world: A difficult equation (in Greek: Ο Τραμπ και ο κόσμος: μια δύσκολη εξίσωση) Foreign Affairs The Hellenic Edition, Vol. 50 (February –March 2018), pp. 41-47.

Participation in Conferences: “Terrorism as a threat for the future of Europe” (in Greek: Η τρομοκρατία ως απειλή για το μέλλον της Ευρώπης), 3rd PSIR Department Conference, Loutraki, 8-10 December 2017.

“The EU-Western Balkans Cooperation on terrorism,” International Conference «The EU and the Balkans at the End of the Second Decade of the 21st Century», Corinth, 4-5 June 2018.

- “The Greek Anti-nuclear agendas in protest movement of the 1980s”, University of Sheffield, University of Exeter and KEDIS International Conference: «Greek Social Movements between Past and Present», Athens, 5-6 April 2019.